James Halliday Wine Companion 2014

“Deep crimson-purple; with redcurrant fruit to the fore; it’s a very good wine, but the amount of tannins and oak makes it a cellaring proposition”.

The West Australian ‘Fresh’ Magazine. 27/12/2012

“A ripe opulent blackcurrant-dominant early-drinking cabernet from Flametree. It’s lively and fruity with an understated use of oak. Tannins are ripe and supple. Well-rounded and complete. An ideal wine for summer when you don’t want those tannins getting in the way”.

Wine Taste Weekly 17/08/2012

“Cliff Royle is one of WA’s most astute and intuitive winemakers, capturing the essence of Margaret River Cabernet even in his easy-drinking quaffer. Its primary, crunchy blackcurrants taste like cabernet straight out of the fermenter, speaking volumes of the juicy appeal of this warm vintage. Fine, rustic fruit tannins provide some structure to the finish, and will appreciate another six months to get comfortable.”

‘Best Buy Wines’ $20 and under

Gourmet Traveller Wine Magazine Feb/Mar 2013

“Finding Margaret River cabernet of this quality for $20 is not easy... There are layers of rich, dense redcurrant and cassis flavours with a hint of licorice and vanilla, plus a velvety texture that is succulent and lush. Bold ripe tannins are pretty well integrated. It’s primal and drinking well now, yet could be cellared in the short term. Rare Value”.

The Cairns Post. Cairns Eye Magazine 20/07/2013

“An easy-drinking red, which gives great bang for buck. Full-bodied and chewy in the mouth, blackcurrant, bay and a touch of tarry earthiness to it.... Will cellar for about 5 years”.
